County Opens New Grant Process By JULIE MELCHOIN Staff Writer The Westchester County Board of Legislators has begun what some are calling the green wave of the new grant process, which is a mixture of public funding and private business incentives for small companies. County officials announced this week that they have received from the State Economic Development Council (SEDC) a total of $14 million in small business grants to help business get started in the county. The total comes from grants totaling $1.7 million and from individual project awards totaling $12.3 million. The county now has 11 small business grants going to local companies that are in various stages of development. The projects range from a software development company at the University of Maryland to a telecommunications company in the Elmwood section. Since the county will be the only issuer of the grants in the southern part of the county, the regional councils can make the awards without the County Board of Legislators. SEDC is the state agency that oversees public-private partnership grants. The money is allocated by the SEDC, with the help of the Regional Councils and the state treasury. According to the SEDC Web site, there are four private sector tools available to help small businesses in a way that is not available in the private sector. The tools are tax exemptions, tax abatements, available properties and capital grants. These grants, which are awarded without an application for payment, are all either 10-year or 25-year grants and need to be renewed every 10 years or 25 years. Each SEDC regional council has board members who decide on the grants. "It is important for the region to continue to invest in economic development and job creation in the New York City, New York and Westchester metro area," County Executive Andrew J. Spano said. "We continue to invest in public-private partnerships that not only bring jobs to our region, but also create an environmentally sustainable and economically revitalized region for our residents." The Westchester County Board of Legislators heard about the grants during its annual planning session on Thursday.

In a cross-sectional study conducted in 1998 in the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, Beatriu de Pinós University Hospital, CIBER Enfermedades Respiratorias, Bellvitge Hospital, Barcelona, Spain, subjects answered questions about their health-care teams, their attitudes toward their professionals, and their psychological and relational needs. An overall satisfaction rate of 58.8% was found and the mean perceived effectiveness rate of the team-member professionals was 85.5%. Significant differences were identified between various groups of professionals, with a lower perception of the effectiveness of the allied health professionals. Differences were also found in attitudes toward professionals, with more positive responses to nurses, physiotherapists, psychiatrists, and psychologists than to doctors (P Pseudopostega nigriperda Pseudopostega nigriperda is a moth of the family Opostegidae.
