A bill overwhelmingly approved by the Texas Senate last week will require the comptroller to adjust the valuation of taxable properties in the appraisal district only if the statewide adjustment is greater than the amount of that district's adjustments. The bill, SB 855, was sent to the House for consideration with a floor amendment that will require the Comptroller to hold a public hearing and determine the impact on the state if adjustments to properties in the district exceed $1.0 billion, even if the statewide adjustment is not larger. Under the bill, the appraisal district will continue to adjust valuation of properties according to the method it has always used, Chief Appraiser Christine Bell said on Monday. That would include any enhancements the district makes to a property in response to claims made by the property owner. The comptroller has yet to issue a ruling on the bill, but the language is clear. If the statewide estimate is greater than the appraisal district's estimate, the appraisal district shall be entitled to adjustments up to the amount of the difference. If the statewide estimate is less than the appraisal district's estimate, adjustments are only made in the appraisal district, and adjustments in the appraisal district can't be greater than the value of the property, Bell said. The bill was introduced in response to a case in which a property was assessed at $1.4 million and then the property was sold for $1.25 million, prompting a lawsuit from the property owner and the trial court's decision that the property should be valued at $1.0 million. "It's so good that we weren't forced to adjust tax values, but this bill gave us the opportunity," said Bell
