They were all there to support Snoop Dogg, who had just been pulled from his car and arrested. A concerned Snoop's mother had driven over from his hometown of Long Beach to retrieve the rapper's property, including his car and various documents. Following a nine-minute search, the police recovered the confiscated items and another, more valuable piece of property — an AK-47. "Every time you see a gun, you're about to be hurt." Snoop's arrest and possession of illegal firearms isn't a story that should come as much of a surprise. It's not the first time the rapper's had a run-in with the law, and it won't be the last. He has done all kinds of stuff to get this album out of the way: he's announced its release, released the cover art, dropped a few samples on YouTube and set up a website. But he 6d1f23a050
